Topic -Mental Health

What many fail to realize is this “modern lifestyle” has become increasingly unsustainable. The number of people with one or more chronic conditions has grown by over 40 million people in the U.S. in the past 25 years. The majority of this impact is a result of lifestyle factors like high stress, lack of sleep, and poor nutrition, among others.

If current trends continue, this number is expected to reach over 170 million in the next decade — despite the billions of dollars invested in healthcare every year. What is needed now more than ever is a reevaluation of how our behaviors affect our health, and the incorporation of this concept into healthcare, so that we can make appropriate long-term changes to our lifestyle.

Acknowledging mental health as a principally impactful driver of individual and national development, the Survey notes that as per the National Mental Health Survey (NMHS) 2015-16, 10.6% adults in India suffered from mental disorders while treatment gap for mental disorders ranged between 70% and 92% for different disorders. Further, the prevalence of mental morbidity was higher in urban metro regions (13.5%) as compared to rural areas (6.9%) and urban non-metro areas (4.3%). Citing NCERT’s Mental Health and Well-being of School Students Survey, the Survey highlights an increasing prevalence of poor mental health among adolescents exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic, with 11% of students reported as feeling anxious, 14% as feeling extreme emotion and 43% experiencing mood swings.

Mental health disorders are associated with significant productivity losses due to absenteeism, decreased productivity, disability, increased healthcare costs, etc. There is also evidence of poverty affecting the risk of mental health via stressful living conditions, financial instability, and a lack of opportunities for upward mobility, which contribute to heightened psychological distress.

So, People should regularly exercise or do the yoga practice, eat well, get enough sleep, stay connected, and be active always. So that one can have good mental and physical health.

People of the legal profession have the duty to the court and to administer justice . it is important for the legal practitioners to act on the basis of integrity, give assistance to the court, and even to promote the public faith in the legal system.

08-10-2024 and 09-10-2024 (BOTH DAYS)

Topic -Law and Language

Prof Rajgopal Rtd. Prof of English Regional institute of education Mysuru topic; he spoke about the Use of language in Law The use of language is crucial to any legal system, not only in the same way that it is crucial to politics in general, but also in two special respects. Lawmakers characteristically use language to make law, and law must provide for the authoritative resolution of disputes over the effects of that use of language. Political philosophers are not generally preoccupied with questions in the philosophy of language. But legal philosophers are political philosophers with a specialization that gives language (and philosophy of language) a special importance.<sup>[1]</sup>

Philosophy of law can gain from a good philosophical account of the meaning and use of language, and from a good philosophical account of the institutionalized resolution of disputes over language. Philosophy of language can gain from studying the stress-testing of language in legal regulation and dispute resolution. And philosophers of language can gain from the reminder that their task is not only to account for what people share in virtue of the mastery of a language; they also need to account for the possibility of disagreements over the meaning and use of language, and for the possibility that there might be good reason for resolving those disagreements in one way rather than another.
